More than 200,000 federal employees have been given the day off.
I am not one of them.

If I'm such essential personnel, what are they going to do on March 1?

We're going to throw ourselves off bridges like lemmings, is what.

(Today I am thankful for underground rail lines. The ones that are running, I mean.)

Some of us do that anyway.

And lemmings don't actually throw themselves off things. More Disney misinformation!

People used to chase them off of cliffs and film it, then sell the footage to nature shows. At least that's what I hear.

Activate the cloning vats they use to make Secret Service agents and DMV employees?

Agent Smith, Agent Jones, Agent Todd...

Yeah, it could happen.

And I wouldn't even have to carry a gun.

It might make up for the self-employment taxes.

Run in circles screaming and shouting?

You got any big plans for the retirement thing? I mean, some folks learn to speak Greek and jet off to faff around on a sunny isle or something.

My father in law threatened to set his alarm clock just like normal for the sheer joy of rolling over, turning it off and announcing 'Nope. Don't have to and not gonna.'

I thought I might catch up on my sleep. And then, I dunno... go get a job or something. Or maybe finally finish that Ph.D.

Time for a fourth career!

You could always be like my dad and decide to spend all your days playing Wii Lego Star Wars.

I'm not sure you could make a career out of it though.

Clearly they will all be sitting by the fire playing boardgames and drinking hot cocoa.
